It was an old common law prin the last the intrument used in the commission of a clime should be forfered as a decodard. That has been the control of the select that expedient most direct, Immediate, and chespect to accomplish the same thing? But I am met here with objections. Genilem nest, I would have ro particular objection to the first clause in this proposed amendment but for the fact of the second clause. I would he will ling to see the slaves emancipated because I know it is a curse and it ought to be out of the way, but I am terribly frightened at that second clause. Poor fellows. They are easily frightened to the second clause. The whole amendment proposed, fellows-citizens, is so simple, so direct and plain that it is strange to me that say human being, endowed with ordinary capacity on a ree sonable amount of honesty, could differ about the construction of htyet men do differ. Great men seem to be differing upon the subject. The clause proposed reads thu: The first section is "that neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to he jurisdiction." This is pisin and very olirect. It does not abelied slavery, but it comes to the point like any common-sense man oug; it to come, to recombine distribution of the status which exists, and that it slamply declares that, in the future and hence forth, it shall not exist in the United States. There is no abolithm of slavery there, but imply a confirmation of the status which exists now as a fact. But this second slavery there, but imply a confirmation of the status which exists now as a fact. But this second slavery there, but imply a confirmation of the status which exists now as a fact. these so called "conservatives" are branding the tried Union men of the St te as "abolition" is. they are in active co-of eration with the origin: of instances they are putting forward the members of that ; arty as their Legislative candidates. These gentlemen are pursuing a course which is fraught with immeasurable peril to all the laterests of Kentucky. We have experienced the horrors of one rebellion; must we prepare for another? We have defeated the rebel party of he state when they were struggling to overthrow the Unlin: must the loyal perile now be regresented in the Legislature of the Common wealth by the laders of that party? Let the ma ses of Kentucky calmly re ect upon the eutral i owers and obligations is very perplexng It says "the party struggling for Indehe neutral that can be tortured into an expres ion of sympathy or an earnest of recognition The Government engaged in putting down the movement, with a contrary motive, will fasten the same interpretation on the very profession of neutrality. The 'concession' of belige ent rights to the Southern Confederacy, it endition. And his late master, we may be as sald on both sides, was a quasi recognition retty sure, will not find emancipation such a of sovereignty. The truth is that, so far from leing a quasi recognition of sovereignty, it was rather a recognition of the fact that the sovereignty of the South was not a fuit ac ampli.' ation he may be delighted with the change. We | The London Post sticks to it that republican it stitutions here have proved a failure, and declares that "in truth, while the North is rejoicing over a restored Union, the South represents the conquered republic, and the broad fact stands out beyond controversy that, in their hour of trial, the form of government and the nd according with his policy," and, if there institutions which were held up as models of hall be any more rebels, he will fight them perfection have failed, fallen to pieces, and become a wreck." The London Standard accuses Lord Russell of disgraceful servility to the North in his circular to the various departments concerned with the supervision of home and colonial ports. The London Star talks sensibly, and considers the whole rebellion fairly subdued, notwithstanding the reports about Kirby Smith and his great army in Texas.

THE VENGEANCE OF JEALOUSY.—The Sultana Djenula has recently perpetrated a most atrocious crime in the murder of a beautiful odalisque of the harem. The rictim, a peerless Circaseian, was remarkable for he victim, a peertess Circassian, was remarkable for her luxuriant and lustrous halr, while the winter of age has shed its snow on the wrinkled temples of the Sultana. The Sultan, it appears, was deeply smitten with the beautiful Circassian, and coldly received the carreses of the Sultana, who endeavored by every means to win the Sultan's love. Philing in this, ahe had the Circassian bowatringed. It was then decovered that she was indebted for her heavily to the new of Streating Carlot and the Sultana is now trying it upon her was higher treates. Authorita.
